Dear Arlette

17 Feb 2010

Thank you so very much for your letter. Your letters mean so much for me that I can sleep all night at the post office to get your letter, and some times I feel that I'm a lucky person to have you care and to be in your thought what you've done for me is more than I can ask or thank you for.

About me I'm OK more none sense (Novel) reading than good reading ok so these are the books I've read from last letter:

- 1- Great expectations for C.D
- 2- The breaker, The brethren, for J.C
- 3- A long way home for I.B
- 4- 3 cups of tea for G.M
- 5- The Road Back of (Twilight) for S.M

So these are nine books and of course some more papers (USA today) and some readings here and there I have two books for John (Irishman J.C) I'm going to finish and then I will move with my GED-which I've started a while ago- and some other school stuff. the problem is some thing here or there that you need some more to get you out of some place educational things need more peace of mind and it's hard to do with that. I have some of this and some of that in a separate paper I will try to write something about ~~the~~ the book you asked me about but I don't get surprised it's my first time to write such thing

Tell me meet hopefully soon Take care with all my best to you my teacher and friend.

Your truly

Omar

A long way Gone

- 1- After I've finished reading A long way Gone. I was struck by the simplicity, truthfulness, and the straight-from-the-heart fact of it, I think I might have a different thought of the naming, which might have called The right way done, and the reason is that everything happened in the right way, the normal way when humans interacted with their heart, when people could see beyond revenge and hate.
- 2- A long way gone is the best example to what humans have reached, from horrors they committed to the way they cured it, and especially in the child field, a treatment that guaranteed success and cures, a way that leaves no traces of the horrors that have scarred the soul, scars one would believe are ^{UN}eraceable.
- 3- But today I see the world treat the same illness in a whole different way, that not only halt its progression, but in fact increase the problem, ways that will cause children confusion and torture the body's and souls, children will be exposed to environments that will split their hearts and souls, putting them in situations full grown men will stand clueless before.
- 5- This book was written a few years ago, but what I see today make it seem century's ago.
- 6- I stand full of sorrow to see a world chose revenge and hate over forgiveness and love, a sad down-slide in a mere few years. It seems that not only the atmosphere had been polluted, but even the people's hearts have been to.

- 4 - children's heart are like sponges that will absorb what is around it, like wet cement soft until it's sculptured in a certain way, a child soul is a sacred dough that must be shaped in a holy way, for there is no good fruit in a bad earth or tree.
7. In the end i must admit that (The right way done) is (A long way Gone)
So will there be HOPE ?!

Dear Arlette :

23. May. 2010

Thank you very much for your two letter and thank for the complement, i dont think i deserve it. And here i am again boring you with my (so called) writing, so long you like it, i will send them, and i hope i've passed being a stoner and acceptable in you modern age.

About me nothing interesting here, there isn't any thing to read that excites me, but if you have any suggestions i will try to ask for. Otherwise life is calm down here filling my time with whatever i can. these day i'm reading about herbs and natural remedies for a human's health not to enjoyable but it's knowledge nonetheless.

Before i end, I say again your letters are one of the most important thing for me down here, i treasure them and reread them they mean alot to me so thank you very much. so tell we meet hopefully soon keep in touch.

with my best wishes to you, Robert, Son, and Arielle your truly friend and future student
